

Hear better. Communicate better. Live better.

Enjoying life during retirement

We know what's important to you—secure finances, staying active and making sure to enjoy each day. Better hearing is an attainable and essential part of living your life to the fullest!

Don't break the bank: Better hearing is a great investment to make in your life. With a variety of hearing aid models available today, there's certain to be one that fits your lifestyle and budget. Oh, and financing options are also available to those who qualify.

Stay active: Attention golfers, walkers and bicyclists—Wind noise got you down? Try the latest hearing instrument with a remote microphone. This unique hearing aid provides a natural, physical barrier that protects the microphone from turbulent air flow and allows you to stay in shape without hesitation or discomfort.

Seize the day: If hearing loss is stopping you from getting out and enjoying your community activities, then it's time to take action and start doing the things you enjoy with the people you love!

What's stopping you from getting answers to your hearing health questions today?

Research confirms that the #1 reason millions of Americans ignore their hearing health is simply lack of good information. More specifically, respondents to a recent study told researchers they don't regularly visit a provider because:

- “My hearing problem isn't bad enough”
- “My hearing problem can't be helped”
- “It costs too much to help my hearing problem”

As hearing health professionals, we can give you a better understanding of your hearing loss, introduce you to the most advanced technology available and provide information on affordable treatment plans.

Schedule an appointment and we can discuss the new hearing instrument technology available to you and cover some of the most common questions people have on hearing loss and technology.
